We basically want to find companions who would give us most of the benefits we think we need. Well, if you are looking for a dog that is somewhat a one-in-package pal, you might find Jack Russell Terriers interesting enough.

The Jack Russell has a past that is kind of loomed to give rise to the species.

History says that the first breeder of Jack Russell Terriers, an Oxford student by the name of John Russell at one time met a milk delivery man who had a snow white terrier with spots on his ears. This dog became his interest which later proved to be his foundation for breeding a new dog breed that many has learned to love as pets. The dog he first saw was named "Trump" from which another 60 types of terriers were later bred from.

A Jack Russell's real nature is to go by ground, terrier comes from the latin "terra" which means "earth", Jack Russell Terriers also love to search and hunt for. Because of this, make sure to give the dog plenty of brushing to get rid of how dirty they get from digging while searching for bones they buried a while ago.

Jack Russell Terriers are great hunters, they can sniff out rats or mice and rid your house of them. Any unlucky rat that happens to be inside the quarters of this terrier is sure to meet its instant doom. So its like the owner has a cat and a dog all wrapped up in one. Its also very important to make sure this dog gets a top quality dog food.

One basic character of this dog is its disposition towards strangers. Its simple for Jack Russell Terriers to figure out who the good guys and bad guys are when it comes to your home. This feistyness makes the Jack Russell Terrier a great watch dog. They were bred to be really aggressive towards prey. And while they can be very vocal, many of them only barks when they find good reason to.

But they just do not appear vicious. But once they smell threat, they can show off aggressiveness that could serve as warning towards the strangers. But, the moment the owner lets the stranger into the house, the Jack Russell warms to them being there.

This terrier is also a family dog and desires for human companionship. And the love they have for kids is really cool. However, once they are abused or had been shown improper treatments, may it be intentional or accidental, they can react through aggressive behaviors. This aggressiveness also adds to their fearlessness towards bigger dogs, which, unfortunately, sometimes gets them in trouble.

They also happen to be very good spirited and extremely intelligent. You'll notice these traits with the Jack Russell's great curiosity in things. Because of this, Jack Russell's need extra training unless you're cool with some overt behavior. The nice thing is that Jack Russells take to training and pass with high marks in most of it. In fact, they are known to champion various ring shows and other similar competitions.

Even the Hollywood elites have noticed the personality of Jack Russells too. Together with great physical characteristics, this dog is already on the movie screens. If Wishbone, Milo (from The Mask) and Eddie (from the Frasier) ring the bell on you then there is no doubt that you can recognize this dog.

The Jack Russell Terriers also do well with their grooming. A dog of relatively small size, this breed will not tax you with grooming needs.
