

Published based on Where Do You Turn If You Must Have Assistance With Your Medicine?

Where Do You Turn If You Must Have Assistance With Your Medicine?

Help for prescriptions is available if you qualify. Prescriptions might be awfully pricey and even more so if you don't have insurance. Help with prescriptions can make your recovery go a lot faster. For those patients with colon cancer, this is particularly true.

Let's say you have been receiving chemo, but it creates an upset belly, as a result you require a anti-nausea medication to go along with it. You will perhaps require an iron supplement too because the chemotherapy will cause you to become anemic. It becomes a brutal cycle. The bottom line is that the medications costs for a cancer patient paying out of pocket could surpass a mortgage payment! At this point you need to turn to a prescription program assistance.

When You Need Help Paying for Your Medications

The one thing you don't want to do is stop taking your medicine. There are a lot of programs accessible that offer free and reduced cost prescription assistance.

- Social Services- Most hospitals have a social worker who may help you uncover grants and other programs aimed at assisting you with your health care requirements. This could be your first stop in looking for assistance. Always report to your doctor of medicine if you can't pay for prescription medicine or treatment. He or she may possibly know of a program firsthand to assist you, too.
- PPARx- The Partnership for Prescription Assistance is a organization aimed at assisting those who can't find the money for their medications. They have produced a database of more than 500 plans and in excess of 5000 prescription medication provided for reduced or no cost aid. They help out in determining what you are eligible for and applying for the aid. The assistance is free and accessible online.
- Pharmaceutical Companies- A great number of consumers wouldn't assume drug companies provide assistance, on the contrary countless do. Boehringer provides a medicines package for patients taking their prescription drugs and cannot manage to pay for them. Discover the maker of your medicines by asking your general practitioner or pharmacist and check the web site for medicines assistance programs.

You can also find this article published on Where Do You Turn If You Must Have Assistance With Your Medicine? , and on the tag pages free medicine, health insurance, help with prescriptions, pap, personal medical insurance , prescription assistance, prescription help, rx help.